Hospital for Special Surgery David H. Koch Pavilion

In recognition of a very generous donation from David H. Koch, The Hospital for Special Surgery is renaming their main hospital pavilion in his honor and SubenDougherty has been selected as the architect for the design and renovation of the main entry procession leading to the David H. Koch Pavilion entrance.

The primary objective of this renovation is to brighten up the enclosed drive and convey an aesthetic that is worthy of the hospital's distinction as the number one orthopedic hospital in the country. The walls surrounding the drive and the columns will all be clad in warm off-white limestone panels, a rhythmic pattern of cobblestone pavers will articulate the drive, pedestrian walkways will be clad in granite slabs and LED lighting will graze all of the wall surfaces further lightening up the space. Recognizing the need for an iconic element in the drive that reflects the hospital's mission and calls out the main entry vestibule location, SubenDougherty has designed a large scale mosaic sculpture that will "grow" out of the limestone wall panels. This undulating blue mosaic is an abstract depiction of water and its movement and will serve as a metaphor, quietly reflecting the Hospital for Special Surgery's primary mission to enhance its patients' mobility and ultimately enhance the quality of their lives.
